

Georgia Governor Hits Intolerance In Tech Address

Thomas W. Hardwick Makes Attack on Social, Political and Religious Intolerance Monday.

PROMISES HIS HELP TO HIGHER EDUCATION

"Intolerance Is the Most Shameful Thing in the Modern World," Governor Tells Tech Seniors.

An attack on social, political and religious intolerance, and a plea for moderation, coupled with the pledge to give his hearty support to the cause of higher education in Georgia, featured the commencement oration of Governor Thomas W. Hardwick before fifteen hundred people assembled in an oak grove on the Tech campus Monday morning at the thirty-third commencement of the institution. The class of 1922, numbering 198 seniors, were given their diplomas at the conclusion of the exercises by the former president of Tech, Dr. K. G. Matheson.

"Moderation is the very opposite of intolerance," declared the governor. "Intolerance is the most shameful thing in the modern world, and it allowed to rule will blacken the pages of American history. It is contrary to the principles and pillars upon which the commonwealth of Georgia was founded. It runs directly counter to those fundamental doctrines of human rights and human liberties so clearly and unambiguously voiced by that great southern statesman, Thomas Jefferson, in the Declaration of Independence."

Moderation Is Cornerstone. "On the other hand moderation is one of the cornerstones of our commonwealth, upon which has been built the greatness of America. It is part of the soil and spirit of Georgia. Independence of political and religious beliefs, and consideration of the rights of others, have long been recognized as the basis upon which true American democracy rests, and to do away with moderation means the rule of democratic principles."

Governor Hardwick declared that wisdom and justice were the other principles, in addition to moderation, upon which the constitution of Georgia rested. He pointed out that the great charter, wrested from King John, of England, several centuries ago by the barons of Runnymede, contained these principles of wisdom, justice and moderation, and James Oglethorpe brought them to America and established them in the early colony of Georgia, which he founded "for the oppressed of all lands and for peoples of every nation who were persecuted for religious or political beliefs."

Governor Hardwick said that "equal and exact justice for all men, black or white, rich or poor, was the proud boast of our modern civilization. The third cornerstone of our civilization is wisdom, and wisdom is not necessarily the same as education. Wisdom is common sense and practical vision and is essential to true education."

Value of Education. Governor Hardwick devoted a great part of his address to education, which he said was necessary to preserve and foster the spirit of Georgia. "Until we wipe out the stain of illiteracy in this state, we have not spent enough money on education. For own part I mean to do all I can to get it; I state to spend more money for education and educational institutions."

"We have a wonderful state here, rivaled by none save California, in either climate or natural resources. If Georgia was surrounded by a Chinese wall we could produce practically every necessity and luxury of life right here, within our own borders, in the 58,000 square miles of the Empire State."

"I have been in every part of Georgia. I know it and I love every square foot of it. We have a state here beautified by nature and glorified by history, extending from the north where stately mountains pierce the crystal sky to the plains of the south where the mighty ocean rolls on the shining sands of the coast. Brave men in the past have made it what it is today, and it is the duty of men like you, graduates to write its history of tomorrow."

Oration for Matheson. A great oration greeted Dr. Matheson, present head of the Drexel Institute in Philadelphia, when he declared that "the finest investment the state of Georgia could make is to develop her vast natural resources to financial aid to the Georgia Institute of Technology," and pointed out to Governor Hardwick that he could write himself "eternally on the pages of Georgia history by helping higher education in the state." Dr. Matheson arrived in Atlanta Saturday to present his diplomas to the graduates at the request of the faculty and trustees.

The professional of seniors and the faculty opened the commencement exercises.

LODGE PREPARING FOR BITTER FIGHT FOR RE-ELECTION

Biggest Men in Republican Ranks to Work for Dean of Senators in Campaign.

PRESIDENT MAY SPEAK ON SENATOR'S BEHALF

G. O. P. Is Regarding Massachusetts as "Western Front" in Coming Battle of Ballots.

BY ROBERT J. BENDER.

United News Staff Correspondent. Washington, June 12.—Senator Lodge, dean of the senate and outstanding figure for re-election this fall, has mapped out the strategy for his battle line, which will be the political situation this year what the west front was to the world war. It is generally admitted that Lodge faces the contest of his life for re-election. For that reason the administration is marshalling all its most effective reserves to get behind him when the critical stage of operations arrives.

Lodge will make no big fight for re-election in the primaries. In the first place it is conceded he should win the primary hands down. In the second place, he feels that, after four terms in congress and nearly thirty years in the senate—totaling almost 37 years in public life—his record and what he stands for is sufficiently well known to the rank and file of his own party to make it unnecessary for him to contest the primary fight with anyone—former Governor Samuel McCall included.

Rally To Aid.

Once nominated, however, Lodge's strategy calls for the most active campaign he ever has waged either personally or through his friends. Realizing the bitter fight that is to be made upon him, the administration, throwing personalities aside, is going into the melee with all of its effective resources. The thought of Lodge—a conspicuous figure in republican politics for over 25 years, now republican leader in the senate, chairman of the foreign relations committee and last remaining pillar of the old guard party in the upper branch of congress—in danger of defeat, has sent a qualm through the whole republican organization.

So it is that arrangements already have been made for the active participation in the campaign of Secretary of State Hughes, who worked with Lodge during the arms conference here; Secretary of War Weeks, and every republican member of the Massachusetts delegation in the house to get into the fight on behalf of Lodge. Even President Harding, who has declared for a general "hands-off" policy, will find it convenient during the campaign to write a letter in Lodge's behalf, if indeed he does not speak in Massachusetts.

Apparently the Massachusetts situation is not as bleak as it appears.

Jefferson Mills, Well Known Newspaper Man, Dies Here Suddenly

Jefferson Shackelford Mills, newspaper correspondent of Decatur, died at the Grady hospital at 1:45 o'clock Monday afternoon from an overdose of bromidia, which he took shortly before 11 o'clock in the morning in a soft drink in a drug store.

Dr. W. S. Doster, who was the first man to reach Mr. Mills after he had fallen, stated that he came into the drug store and asked for a soft drink. When it was served to him, he emptied some powders into it from a package and drank it. He almost immediately sank to the floor unconscious.

The body has been removed to the chapel of A. S. Turner, in Decatur. Mr. Mills was one of the best known men in and around Decatur, having at times represented all three Atlanta dailies as correspondent. He recently moved from Decatur to Edgewood.

Interment services will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, from the Decatur Presbyterian church. Rev. D. P. McGeech will preside, assisted by Dr. E. G. Thomas. His survivors are: six daughters, Mrs. James S. Ivey, Mrs. Frank M. Smith, Misses Beatie, Ethel, Nellie, and Ruth Mills; three sons, Jefferson, Jr., John, and Reginald Mills; two brothers, John S. Mills, of Lawrenceville, Ga.; Robert Mills, of Lithonia, Ga. He is also survived by his widow, who was Miss Sylvia Regan before her marriage.

NEW FIGHT BREWS AGAINST NEWBERRY ON NAVY FINANCES

Senator King, of Utah, Charges Political Scheme to Wreck Mare Island Navy Yard.

APPROPRIATION CUT TWO-THIRDS TOTAL

Newberry Said to Head Move to Build Up Pacific Coast Station at Alameda.

Washington, June 12.—A new fight against Senator Truman H. Newberry for his activities in revising the naval appropriations bill is brewing in congress.

A group in both the senate and house are preparing to offer determined resistance to the attempts of Newberry in slashing the Mare Island provision of the appropriations measure.

The Mare Island paragraph is the "pet" of Representatives Kelley of Michigan and Madden, of Illinois, who drew up the appropriations bill in the house and obtained its passage. While the bill was in committee in the senate the Mare Island appropriation was cut from $750,000 to $250,000. Senator King, democrat, of Utah, has started the fight against the bill with a formal statement referring to the cut.

King Charges Plot.

"I shall not call attention to what the committee would do with the five hundred thousand dollars taken away from Mare Island," he said. "But a comparison of the house and senate bills will furnish some enlightenment. This bill should be, and I am sure will be, fairly and impartially considered without reference to geography or political considerations."

King charged there was a plot in congress to shoot the bill through without proper consideration. He declared that inasmuch as the fiscal year ends June 30 the bill was purposely held up until the last moment so that it could not be thoroughly threshed out on the floor.

Regrets Unfairness.

The conspirators, he said, wished to destroy Mare Island and make the big Pacific naval base at Alameda in San Francisco bay. This would cost the taxpayers more than a hundred million dollars, King said.

He served clear notice of the fight when he said: "Mare Island is not going to be abandoned and the distinguished senator from Michigan, Mr. Newberry, and his colleagues who voted with him in committee should reconcile themselves to that fact."

"I regret that the committee frankly the bill have dealt in such an impolitic, not to say unfair manner, with Mare Island."

Scheme of Wrecking.

"The appropriation for drying and dredging has been reduced from $750,000 to $250,000. It would seem that the scheme devised some time ago in the navy department and aided and abetted by some eminent persons in and out of congress to wreck and destroy Mare Island, which is undoubtedly the most efficient of the naval establishments, is still being prosecuted. More than $35,000,000 of the taxpayers' money have been expended in building up the Mare Island plant."

"I am advised that the distinguished senator from Michigan, Mr. Newberry, gave the weight of his great influence to this plan to destroy Mare Island."

Rio Women All Beautiful. No Reformers—No Prohibitionists—Let's Go!

BY RODNEY DUTCHER.

United News Staff Correspondent. Chicago, June 12.—There are two ways for women to get what they want. One is to get up and go out and fight for it, and the other is to be just a woman.

The second method is found to work out with great success in Brazil and is preferred by the women of that country, who may recline luxuriously in the tropical shade all day long, drinking coffee, lemonade or anything else, and yet have just as much influence in the nation's affairs as women do in the United States.

This is the word of Donna Bertha Lutz, of Rio De Janeiro, who was the Brazilian delegate to the recent pan-American conference of women and who could as easily be Brazil's representative at any international beauty congress. Donna Lutz is here as the guest of Jane Addams, of Hull House.

What's the Fare?

Brazil must be a great place to live in. Donna Lutz explained that nearly all the women are beautiful, that they dress in Paris styles, and

Constitution Among Papers to Publish Ex-Kaiser's Memoirs

After Exciting Race Across Ocean, Syndicate of Papers, Including The Constitution, Exclusively From Georgia, Secures Sole Publication Rights to Former Emperor's Memoirs at the Highest Cash Price Ever Paid in History of Publishing.

Berlin June 12.—Berlin and Leipzig have been the scenes during the last four weeks of the most extraordinary competition of groups of newspaper and book publishers that has ever occurred. These groups included, directly and indirectly, practically every important newspaper in the world and many leading book publishers. The object of the competition was to secure the serial rights and the bookright to the personal memoirs of the former German kaiser, which have been long in preparation and were declared ready to be offered for publication early in May.

In a private sitting room in the Hotel Adlon at midnight last night the competition came to end with the payment of the highest cash figure in the whole history of literature and publication to the Leipzig publishing house, which is the former kaiser's agent. For this large sum, the Leipzig house sold the world-wide rights, excluding German language rights, to Wilhelm II's memoirs, covering his entire career from kaiser to ex-kaiser, to an organization of newspapers headed by The New York Times and the McClure Newspaper syndicate and to the New York publishing house of Harper & Brothers.

Successful Newspaper Bidders.

Included among the other newspapers in the successful group of competitors are: THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, The Chicago Daily News, The St. Louis Globe Democrat, The Cleveland Plain Dealer, The Pittsburg Gazette-Times, The Boston Post, The Detroit News, The Denver Post, The San Francisco Bulletin, The Los Angeles Times, The Seattle Times, The Kansas City Journal-Post, The Spokesman-Review, The Omaha News, La Nacion, of Buenos Aires; The Mexico City Excelsior, The Havana El Mundo, The London Sunday Times. Harper & Brothers will have the American and Canadian bookrights, Cassel & Co., of London, the English and colonial bookrights. Leading newspapers and publishing houses all over the rest of the world will also publish the work.

As the record-breaking duplicate contracts, written on one small sheet of hotel stationery, were signed, sealed and mutually delivered, a struggle ended that involved, among other dramatic features, a race against time across the Atlantic by the principal losing bidder, who definitely lost by dialing for a day in Paris instead of airplaning to Leipzig in time for a final stroke.

Race For Book Begins.

The former kaiser was a long time making up his mind whether or not to publish his memoirs, but early last spring the Leipzig publishing house of K. F. Koehler, founded in 1789, offered a special three weeks' privilege of examination and consideration of the manuscript to the American group of which The Times, the McClure Newspaper syndicate and Harper & Brothers were members. Then the real race for the former kaiser's book began.

Clinton T. Brainard, president of Harper & Bros. and the McClure Newspaper syndicate, caught the first fast boat for Europe, the Aquitania, to canvass European possibilities for marketing the book, while his organizations were thoroughly canvassing the American field, and cables were humming to China, Japan, India, South Africa and Australia, leaving no corner of the globe ungleamed.

Two American Rivals.

The German publishers, while absolutely living up to their agreement, had, in conscientious safeguarding of the author's financial interests, to let it be known to interested persons that bids were receivable, and cabled offers, mostly unconnected and, as a rule, each merely offering more than anybody else, began to inundate the Leipzig publishers and the former kaiser himself.

The seriously taken rivals resolved themselves into two American groups, with powerful international allied interests and connections. A tourist rush of American newspaper owners, publishers, editors, managers and what not to Europe set in. Correspondents were withdrawn from the Genoa conference as negligible in comparison with the kaiser book deal. Correspondents and publishers' representatives hurried to Berlin and Leipzig and back to Paris and London. Behind the scenes there was intense activity all over the map of Europe.

Concluded Optional Contract.

Ten days after the reading of the manuscript the representatives of the group that was finally successful, went to Leipzig, where they concluded what proved to be a strange-hold contract, offering a record-smashing number of dollars for world-wide rights, to be paid in cash in two weeks, with the privilege of one week more within which to meet any larger bona fide offer, cash in hand, which the German publishers might receive before the expiration of the two weeks' period.

A dramatic incident now ensued. It was a tense moment for the representatives of this group in Berlin, when they were informed from New York that a plenipotentiary representative of a powerful competing group of bidders would sail on the Berengaria, with a cargo of cash, to throw his hat and his purse into the "kaiser book" ring. Last Tuesday at midnight the kaiser manuscript would automatically become the property of the first group unless the rival bidder could reach Leipzig before then and make the German publishers a higher bid, at the same time tendering the money in hand.

The first group had already fulfilled every jot and tittle of their part of the contract, including the tender of cash. How this was accomplished must remain a mystery, as it was almost physically impossible to tender the record-breaking amount involved in German cash, to-wit, paper marks. It would have required a caravan of 18 carriers, each burdened to

EXISTENCE FIGHT NOW FACES UNIONS SAY LABOR CHIEFS

As Forty-Second Annual Convention of A. F. of L. Opens in Cincinnati on Monday.

SPEECH BY GOMPERS FEATURES FIRST DAY

President Says Organized Labor Asks Conferences With Employers on "Equal Footing."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Cincinnati, June 12.—Facing a fight that leaders of organized labor regard as one for the existence of the unions, the American Federation of Labor here today opened its 42d annual convention, which was marked by the presentation of many issues that are to be considered during the next two weeks, and a speech by President Samuel Gompers, declaring "we do not fool ourselves into any tattered security." The issues were brought before the delegates by the report of the federation's executive council.

"We are not in a mood," said Mr. Gompers, "to have those rights and privileges guaranteed to us by our constitution taken from us by any subtle reasoning or assumption of power no matter whence it emanates."

The veteran labor leader also stated that organized labor would "go on" and forward more determined "than ever that there shall not be imposed upon our brow upon our backs, the type of the man with the hoe."

For Equal Footing.

In his brief speech, Mr. Gompers declared organized labor only asked employers to meet with the union leaders in conferences for the settlement of any disputes, but he said a genuine conference was impossible unless both sides stand on an equal footing. The "open shop," he added, is not the result of conferences. Mr. Gompers concluded with a reference to the disarmament conference, asserting it made a beginning toward abolishing war, and that labor, throughout the world made the "greatest contribution toward that purpose."

The convention session also was marked by presentation of a report by Santiago Iglesias, president of the Free Federation of Workers, of Porto Rico, endorsing the administration of E. Mont Rely, as governor of Porto Rico.

Membership Loss.

While the executive council's report centered around any questions that will come before the convention it also showed the total membership of the federation is 3,150,035. Although this is a loss of 710,835 in the last year, members of the committee pointed out that it was a gain of more than 1,100,000 over 1910, which year was followed by big gains during the war. Further, the report told of labor's accomplishments of the last year, which it said, was marked by "unusual strife and unusual industrial depression."

Bathing Beauty Ban May Result In Legal Fight

Chief Beavers Rapped by Trammell Scott for Preventing Exhibition.

Officials of the Prade Sporting Goods company, 184 Peachtree street, will decide Tuesday morning whether they will apply to the superior court for an injunction restraining Police Chief James L. Beavers from his announced purpose of prohibiting the exhibition of the latest styles in bathing suits for women shown on live models, which was to have been held for three successive afternoons between the hours of 5:30 and 7:30 o'clock, beginning Tuesday.

Trammell Scott, of the Prade Sporting Goods company, stated Monday evening that the suits to be shown and the models to wear them in their window had been selected by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, which last week fostered the "bathing suit revue" at Lakewood.

"The public morals will be debauched as much by a visit to Piedmont park or Grant park or any place where girls are allowed to go swimming as it will by observing in our window the identical costumes worn at these places," Mr. Scott continued.

The Prade Sporting Goods company has expended a large sum of money in the preparation of appropriate scenery, etc. for the purpose of making the exhibition a most artistic affair, and the officials were keenly disappointed at the position taken by Chief Beavers, stating that if he employed one-fifth of the energy and effort he uses to interfere in matters of this kind, in getting his men to prevent or to check crime, he would come nearer to measuring up to the responsibilities of his office.

Chief Beavers' action followed a visit to his office of a delegation from the Council of Christian Churches which protested against the exhibition. In the delegation were Dr. J. Sprule Lyons, C. A. Pitts, Charles N. Walker, John A. Manget, M. L. Throver, S. J. Coogler and James M. Mon.

Prison Probers Told Of Vile Conditions At Convict Farm

NEXT BIG PRIMARY BATTLE FOR G. O. P. IS NORTH DAKOTA

Progressives Making Hard Fight Against McCumber for Nomination to United States Senate.

OLD GUARD TREMBLES AFTER THREE DEFEATS

McCumber Is Leader of Tariff and Bonus Proposals—Machine Works Hard for Him.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, June 12.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—With the defeat of the old line republican organization, a matter of record in the states of Iowa, Pennsylvania and Indiana, the next most significant primary, in which the policies of the Harding administration will be subjected to progressive scrutiny, comes in North Dakota. This primary will be held on the last Wednesday of June.

Should the western state follow Pennsylvania and Indiana, it will be nothing short of a complete breakdown of the old line republican organization in the opinion of capital observers. In addition to that, Senator McCumber's defeat would be hailed as a direct repudiation of the permanent tariff bill, of which he is joint author. The North Dakota senator is not only chairman of the committee which formulated the tariff bill but is its chief advocate and proponent during debate.

Bonus Factor.

Aside from the tariff, McCumber's connection with the present bonus bill, or "soldiers' compensation bill," as he chooses to call it, may prove to be a considerable factor. Senator McCumber is alleged to have disregarded recommendations of his colleagues in forming the bonus and accepted his own proposals, in order that he might assume full credit for its passage which is assured. In doing this, it is charged that he deliberately disregarded advice from the president and both republican and democratic members of the senate. This in the face of a threat of presidential veto.

Ordinarily, it has been pointed out, a republican primary in North Dakota would be of national significance. No more so than a primary in the south. But because of the defeated progressive ticket, and the circumstances surrounding his candidacy, the situation is unusual, and one upon which the political eyes of the country will be turned.

McCumber is regarded as an integral part of the old guard machine, regardless of his administration discrepancies, and every effort will be made to promote his election. It is said that ordinarily his defeat would be considered a disaster.

Great Excitement Caused by Chase In College Park

Three Men Surrender After Many Shots Are Fired at Their Car.

The entire population of College Park was thrown into a near panic late Monday evening during an exciting race between an automobile containing three men and another commanded by Police Chief Jack Winkle and Officer A. E. Renfro, of the College Park constabulary.

The chase lasted for more than two hours and covered in all probably 20 miles in and out, around and about College Park and East Point, and it was punctuated at intervals by volleys of shots fired by the officers.

It ended about four miles from College Park on the Riverdale road, when the men stopped their machine and surrendered. According to Chief Winkle the car contained W. T. Smith, of the East Point Lumber company; Will Rivers and Lewis Brown, of College Park. All three were carried to the College Park police barracks, Smith being released under a $100 bond, and Rivers, being held for further investigation.

No case was made against Brown by Chief Winkle. "He was just a passenger in the car by invitation of friends, and we know of no charge that could be made against him," the chief added.

The pursuit began when the machine was seen to enter the

SYSTEM IS WRONG, SAYS DONALDSON

Afternoon Session Is Featured by Clash Between Board Member and Representative Perryman.

BY MARION KENDRICK.

Staff Correspondent. Milledgeville, Ga., June 12.—(Special.)—Georgia's state prison farm today was pictured to the governor's special investigating committee as a place of horrors equalling those of the inquisition and then, in one instance, likened to a haven, which prisoners in county convict camps sought to reach.

The hearing was held in the Baldwin county courthouse and was featured in the afternoon by an attack launched by the prison commission on prosecution witnesses, which resulted in a heated verbal clash between Judge T. E. Patterson, of the board, and A. Jones Perryman, Jr., of Talbot, chairman of the house penitentiary committee.

This incident came as a complete surprise, when Judge Patterson, with out permission fired a question at Representative Perryman, who was condemning conditions at the farm and charging the commission with operating a lobby. The clash ended when the commissioner withdrew his question as the legislator endeavored to give a complete answer.

Donaldson on Stand.

Then followed the sensational testimony of Bert Donaldson, of Atlanta, who asserted that he had just completed an investigation at the penitentiary at the request of the Atlanta Church Aid association, and who was interrupted several times by Judge Patterson.

By far the most important development of the day, however, was the evidence submitted by J. Christie, former convict, who remained on the stand over three hours, outlining many alleged instances of cruelty to prisoners.

The next two outstanding events were the testimony of Mrs. A. L. Alexander, of Atlanta, who told how her brother, Robert L. Denson, a world war veteran, had been whipped, and the story of M. B. Medlin, of Macon, who said he came voluntarily to the hearing to brand as false many of the charges made against the prison commission and penitentiary and to say that the farm was a place of so many attractions that county convict camp prisoners desired to be incarcerated there.

Dirty Hospital.

"I have made several trips to the farm," Donaldson asserted. "Three weeks ago I went to the tubercular hospital. The beds were spotted with bloody sputum. The linen was unclean; found men sleeping in the dining room and no curtains were provided to keep the rain from those lying near the open area of the building."

"Most of the beds were arranged in a wide open space, where it was impossible for inmates to keep from witnessing the death struggles of others. Plaster had fallen from the walls and the place was in a generally bad condition."

"I talked with Mr. Proctor, in charge of the hospital, and asked what was the cause of the situation. He told me that lack of funds made it impossible to remedy conditions. I told him that I would bring someone else with me sometime who might be able to lend assistance."

Find Improvement.

"Sunday I carried two nurses and officials of the anti-tuberculosis association with me to the institution. We found a remarkable improvement, but the nurses and officials found many things I had not noticed."

"Some of the prisoners at the farm told me that they had been scouring, scrubbing and slinging whitewash all over the place since Governor Hard-

After the laughter following this statement, Judge Patterson interrupted. "Didn't you know that we appointed a new superintendent about that time?"

"Did you? Well, thank God," Donaldson shouted back at him, "and you got some new, clean sheets, too, didn't you?"

Raps for Order.

Judge W. E. H. Searcy, chairman of the committee, again had to rap for order before the hearing was resumed.

"I found in my investigation at the farm, where the men were worked, that the man with money and influential friends could buy food and clothing, while the poor fools there had to live in hell. The wealthy prisoners, or those who had outside aid, did not complain and the others were afraid to talk freely."

The witness then resumed his testimony of conditions at the farm, declaring that Proctor was a farmer, had never read any books relating to the treatment administered to the prisoners, and had never been instructed on the subject. Donaldson said he asked the officer if Dr. T. F. Abernethy, head of the state health department, had ever visited the place, and he replied in the negative.

System Is Wrong.

"Proctor is a child of the system and the system is wrong," he stated, "and this system shows that we don't care much for those poor dying devils out there. I don't blame Proctor. I blame myself as a citizen of Georgia. You and I are responsible in a large degree for the conditions that exist at the state farm for the very simple reason we haven't demanded beneficial changes."

"I believe that if the people knew of the true conditions that exist behind these walls, they would compel the general assembly to appropriate sufficient funds to equip the place and see that it is properly administered. I would have gone a long ways several years ago toward abolishing the last of slavery. If the prison commission with its force had not held me in check."

Atlanta Testifies.

Henry Borg, of Atlanta, who recently finished a term at the state farm, testified that he had seen many prisoners carried to the warden's office to be whipped. While waiting on the outside, he continued to hear the sound of the lash falling on the backs of the men.

He described several instances covering these alleged whippings, one of which was the beating of a crazy negro on the night of December 28. Another time, he continued, eleven white men were marched into the office and whipped because they were late at a dinner call.

"On the day I was released," he testified, "Dr. M. P. Compton, (the prison physician) carried me to the depot. Just after we arrived, he said: 'Now Henry, don't you go back to Atlanta and raise all kind of hell like this fellow Christie.'"

"I replied that I had read several of Christie's articles in the newspapers and that since I knew that his charges were true, I would be compelled to write him up."

Letters written by prisoners at ways were read, he continued, and sometimes withheld. A registered letter written by Arnold Worley, an inmate, to Senator Thomas E. Watson, complaining of the withholding of mail was never delivered, he declared, according to the best of his knowledge.

"The corn that we were fed was eaten up with worms. These worms were cooked with the food," he continued. "Why they insisted on including the worms, I don't know, unless it was an effort to make up for lack of meat. The corn was withheld from us after a period, and old prisoners told me that the farm officers were saving what was left for the visit of the penitentiary committee of the general assembly."

A high complaint was paid by the witness to J. Pope Brown, who for a short period before his recent death was superintendent of the institution. He stated that "Brown was a fine man—not of the slave-driving type."

"When the superintendent became very ill," he continued, "this man, the first time in the history of the penitentiary, prayed that he might recover."

Christie Questioned.

When Christie stood the stand in the afternoon, Judge Hammond began questioning him about his past life. The witness objected to these questions at first, but when the judge insisted he answered a number of them. Other members took up the questioning and accepted his reason for not answering all of them. Christie asserted that after completing his term at the farm, although he personally was well treated as compared with others, he desired to aid "the men he left behind." He was "sent up" because he embodied about $1200 from the Macon Telegraph.

"In placing my name before the state, I have done so because I know it was the only way to get an investigation and place the facts before the public. You cannot imagine how embarrassing it is for a man to parade his shame before the public, but I have done so in order that these poor devils may not get some more."

The witness, in reply to a question, said he was born in a northern state and had resided in Georgia about five years. He said that his record, with the exception of a number of misdemeanors, was clean. Judge Hammond asked if he feared detection for some other misdeed in his life and wanted to know if Christie was his real name. Christie reiterated his former statement relative to his record and stated that his real name was Christie. "It may be too late, now that this hearing is receiving so much publicity outside the walls of the penitentiary, but if it becomes necessary I will answer any question."

Replying to a question, he said that he was not in the employ of the Macon Telegraph, and that W. T. Anderson, editor of the paper, had published his cards relative to the farm because Mr. Anderson had received information in addition to his own and believed that the charges were true. The editor, he continued, was of the opinion that by bringing these charges before the public and securing an investigation, he would be rendering a service to humanity.

The prison physician, who was the center of most criticism of the witnesses, was given another barrage by Christie in his afternoon testimony. He mentioned case after case of alleged negligence, particularly his failure to treat W. R. Lipscomb, an Atlanta boy, and the latter's subsequent death.

Face Accused.

Compton said facing Christie. As the witness continued, he glared at him and appeared greatly agitated. Several times Compton started as if to speak, but controlled himself, remaining silent. Christie looked the physician straight in the face when he had any evidence relating to him. In answer to a question by Judge Searcy, the witness stated that there was no refrigerating plant of any kind at the farm, and declared that frequently the sick were without sufficient food. He told how milk used for patients in the infirmary was kept each day, until after he made a complaint in the window of a washroom. He also told of the report that the prison authorities were holding back corn as food in order that the investigating committee of the general assembly might be impressed by the sight of surplus supply produced on the farm.

Wrong Diagnosis.

W. B. Norton testified that he was sentenced to life imprisonment at the state farm. While there he became ill, he said, and complained of pain in arms and legs. Dr. Compton wanted to give him a remedy for venereal disease, which he did not have. Norton continued after a short period, Compton insisted on injecting the fluid and did so over both his protest and that of Warden Smith, said the witness. He became seriously ill and almost died, he asserted, and rising from his chair he removed his coat and exhibited a maimed and scarred arm.

"I maintain," declared Norton, "that the doctor did not know his business, and has ruined my arm for life. He injected this fluid over the advice of other physicians and when I knew that I had no venereal disease."

Purchased Own Flour.

Medlin, in his testimony, stated that he received excellent treatment while he was at the farm 11 days. He declared that he never lacked food and always had more than he could eat. Later, the committee developed through questioning that he had purchased his own flour, which is allowed by the prison officials of prisoners who have money, it was testified.

"I had as many as 40 biscuits 'cooked each time,'" said Medlin, "and made other purchases at the store on the farm."

No whipping occurred while he was imprisoned there, he said. Mrs. Alexander stated that Denison, her brother, received $90 a month from the government as a result of disabilities caused by wounds received in France. Her brother's condition before the war, she said, was perfectly normal. Now, she continued, he is subject to "fits."

Perryman On Stand.

In introducing Mr. Perryman, Judge Searcy stated that he had summoned him on account of his position as chairman of the house penitentiary committee, which made an investigation of the farm last summer, and at the request of Christie.

The clash between Judge Patterson and the witness came near the close of the latter's testimony after the committee had requested that the report of the house penitentiary investigation be entered into the record. "In submitting this report," asked Judge Patterson, "did you include the minority?"

The committee and witness appeared surprised at the sudden entrance of the prison commissioner into the examination, but Mr. Perryman answered: "I did not, and I'll tell you why."

The judge shouted back: "I don't ask why. I just ask you that single question. I withdraw it now."

Answers Nevertheless.

"I insist on answering the question, if you will stay but a minute," Perryman stated, and during the confusion he asserted that the committee had asked him only for information as he had personally gathered and that the minority report was not a part of his observations and facts gained at the investigation.

Judge Patterson later asked Mr. Perryman if he had ever been to the commission during the investigation and asked for aid or information during the investigation.

There was further objection to the witness answering by members of the committee and Judge Patterson again withdrew his question, but Perryman replied.

"Not Duty."

"I will say that I have never been in the commission office for the simple reason that it was not my duty to do so."

The witness declared that adoption of a resolution calling for an investigation of the commission and the prison farm, including all records, was prevented by "pressure brought to bear by the commission," referring to an alleged lobby conducted by the board.

The remainder of his testimony was an elaboration of the report returned by the house committee.

Headlights of Report.

In its report the penitentiary committee declared that there are certain phases of the state farm which should be further investigated, and recommended that a sub-committee of at least seven be named to make a thorough investigation, including "all records in the office of the prison commission and its subsidiary agencies."

Referring to the escape of Abe Powers, famous bunco artist, from the prison farm last year, the report asserted that "we find the prison commission has been derelict and has neglected its duty in this case." Particular attention was called to the fact that Powers was made a trustee within three days after he arrived at the farm. The bunco artist was not under guard at the time he escaped, the report continued, and for this reason passed before the warden learned of the disappearance.

Attention also was called to the law requiring the prison commission itself to assign members to the state farm, and declared that in the cases of Powers and others the board had neglected to perform its duty in that it allowed the secretary to send convicts to the penitentiary without authority from the commission.

"Abide by Laws."

"We recommend," read the report, "that in the future the prison commission abide by the laws of Georgia in the performance of its duties."

All food was suitable for prisoners, except that provided for the sick, it was stated. Clothing was found to be sufficient. The water supply, the report continued, was not just what it should be. The water was usually not at the farm, and the flushing system was very poor and piping in bad fix. All buildings were reported to be in good condition, with the exception of the tubercular hospital, "which is badly in need of repairs."

On the subject of sanitary conditions, the report said "the bunks in the tubercular ward and the female ward were deplorably infested with lice. Inmates with infectious diseases and insane prisoners were not separated, but compelled to eat and sleep in the same quarters, it was asserted."

"We also found in the female colored ward sweat boxes just large enough to hold a man, and were to be confined for punishment; said sweat boxes containing chains for the purpose of preventing the prisoners incarcerated therein from assuming a more dignified attitude," the report continued. "These sweat boxes have no ventilation."

The keeper of the dining halls was commended for keeping them in a "well arranged and sanitary condition."

Morning Session.

Chief interest developed at the morning session was in connection with the testimony of J. Christie, of Macon, whose original charges of cruelty at the state prison farm was one of the subjects of the present investigation. Christie recently completed a term of service in the prison.

Christie made the specific charge that Robert Lee Denison, convict sentenced in Fulton county on a charge of stealing an automobile, was brutally whipped at the prison although he was a paroled convict and epileptic and was afflicted mentally.

Another charge of inhumanity at the prison was made by Christie in connection with the recent death of V. R. Lipscomb, a prisoner from Atlanta. Christie said Lipscomb had suffered severely for four or five days with diabetes, but said the prison physician, Dr. M. P. Compton, refused to examine Lipscomb. He said Dr. Compton declined to visit Lipscomb although Christie had appealed to the high physician himself in behalf of the prisoner.

Christie added that Warden J. E. Smith himself had criticized the failure of the physician to give prisoners proper medical treatment. He denied, however, that all the prison officials "lunge together" and that prisoners who "tell things outside" are harshly treated. Christie said Warden Smith had declined to return to Lipscomb money which Lipscomb had deposited with him. He said the tradition is that the warden does not allow the prisoners their own money "until he gets good and ready."

Charges Neglected.

Christie told a story of the death of two negro prisoners whom he said were shamelessly neglected. One of them, he said, was a white man, and the prison physician suspected he was shamming, he said. Christie said the negro was given what is known as a high life, and the white man was given a low life. He said the negro's name was Alf Law and that he dropped dead a day or two after the "high life" was administered.

The story of the death of the white prisoner, S. R. Tompkins, who was suffering with stomach trouble, was told by Christie. He said the prison physician, Dr. Compton, suspected Tompkins because he did not have a high temperature.

"Six men died while I was on duty at the hospital," Christie testified. "There was no minister on duty, and no close friend at their bedside. There was more concern shown by the prison officials over the death of a little boy, and no minister was there over the death of these men."

Prison Water Supply.

Christie said the water supply at the prison was insufficient and unsatisfactory. He said that the prisoners were not supplied with enough clothing. He said he had seen men go into the fields in the night after the hearing of evidence was finished for the day. The investigation may last throughout the week, Judge Searcy said.

It is determined to go to the very bottom of these charges, and will not end the hearing until all evidence has been heard, investigated and other matters relating to investigation completed," he declared.

LODGE PREPARING FOR BITTER FIGHT

ation is clearing in so far as McCall's independent candidacy for the senate is concerned. He has told friends here that if he found the demand strong enough he would enter the republican primaries in opposition to Lodge. Once he did this it would preclude the possibility, under the Massachusetts law, of making the fight as an independent candidate. He has indicated he would name the primary race if any, and would not run as an independent in the elections—as republicans had feared, and as democrats had hoped.

"If I go to bat," he told friends here recently, "it will be to knock a home-run and not to drive out a sacrifice fly that would score a democrat on base."

If McCall runs in the primary, however, it will be well to note his vote, say political leaders, in touch with the Massachusetts situation. For the vote for McCall will be the vote of protest against Lodge and will figure conspicuously in the chances the democratic nominee has for election.

SPARTA LUMBER MAN DIES OF APPENDICITIS

Days Delay Lost Race.

The principal rival bidder was racing against time across the Atlantic on the Berengaria with huge dollar credits. Could he arrive in time and tender the cash in Leipzig? The time limit was up at Tuesday midnight.

The Berengaria landed her passengers at Cherbourg early Monday afternoon. The latest bidder reached Paris that evening. There was a train leaving Paris at 9:30 p. m., and arriving in Berlin at 10 p. m. Tuesday—just two hours' leeway for trumping the contract bid. On Tuesday it was learned in Berlin that the new bidder had remained in Paris overnight. But it was still possible to win by a nose by airplane. The racing competitive bidder dallied that day in Paris and took the night train—and lost.

Expert readers for the rival bidders have made enthusiastic reports about the serial feature value, as well as the permanent historical value of the work as a research book. The fifteen chapter headings are: 1, Bismarck; 2, Caprivi; 3, Hohenlohe; 4, Buelow; 5, Bethmann-Hollweg; 6, My Assistants and Our Successes With Regard to Public Administration; 7, Science and Art; 8, My Relations With Religious Denominations; 9, Army and Navy; 10, The Outbreak of the War; 11, The Pope and Peace; 12, The End of the War and My Abdication; 13, Up to the Bar of a Neutral Tribunal; 14, The Question of Guilt; 15, The Revolution and the Future of Germany.

The kaiser's memoirs are summarized as an intensely personal, vivid, detailed narrative, all in the first person singular, holding attention from start to finish, with just one climax after another.

PUBLICATION TO BEGIN SEPTEMBER 1.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Berlin, June 12.—The world rights, both book and serial, of the former German emperor's memoirs have been secured by an American syndicate for a quarter of a million dollars. McClure's syndicate controls the serial rights, which have already been bought by a score of leading American newspapers, according to the statement of Clinton T. Brainard, president of the McClure Newspaper syndicate. The serial publication will begin September 1. Harper will issue the memoirs in book form in November. The book contains 80,000 words.

ENVOYS TO TALK OVER WAR DEBTS

Paris, June 12.—The departure of the mission which will discuss the war debts question with representatives of the United States is imminent, it was learned at the foreign office today. Jean V. Parmentier, administrator of the ministry of finance, who was selected to head the commission, may find it impossible to leave his work at present. In this event Premier Poincare will select another to head the commission which will not be unduly delayed.

FISCAL STATEMENTS COMING TO U. S.

Washington, June 12.—Foreign nations—world war debtors of this country—have begun submitting to the allied debt funding commission statements of their financial conditions in the light of their obligations to the United States.

It was said today at the treasury that two nations have presented briefs of their fiscal conditions in connection with the debts to this country. The names of these two were withheld, however. Their statements were being analyzed by the commission, it was explained, and would be very helpful when the negotiations for the funding of the obligations were begun.

Statements from the other debtor nations are expected by the commission. So far, it was said, nothing official of the debt question has been heard from Great Britain since the formation of the commission, although the belief was expressed at the treasury that a special mission to discuss that nation's indebtedness might be expected at any time.

Meantime it was indicated at the treasury, funding negotiations will be begun with France unless early activity develops on the part of Great Britain, who owes about $5,000,000,000 of the total $11,000,000,000 foreign debt to the United States.

Mrs. Mason was cut about the hands and had her face gashed, while Mr. Mason was badly shaken up. The whole party was badly shaken up.

Mr. Mason told call officer Schilling that he was driving out DeKalb avenue at a moderate rate of speed, and that when he tried to read a street sign, the car crashed into a post.

INTOLERANCE HIT BY GEORGIA GOVERNOR

ercises at ten o'clock Monday morning. A mighty Tech yell greeted the appearance of the graduates and the band struck up, "I'm a Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech," while the seniors stood with bowed heads and, for the last time as students, listened to the strains of that old battle cry.

Invocation was delivered by Dr. D. P. McGeachy, pastor of the Deacons Presbyterian church. Nathaniel Palmer Pratt, administrative executive of Georgia Tech, made an introductory address and introduced the speakers.

Chancellor Barrow, of the University of Georgia, delivered an address to the graduates, telling them of what their life work meant to the world, and the necessity of sticking to their ideals if they meant to achieve success. The closing address to the graduates was delivered by ex-Governor N. E. Harris, president of the Tech Board of Trustees, one of the men instrumental in founding Tech and bringing it to its present position of eminence in the educational world.

"This is a great institution," declared the former governor, "I want to congratulate you men on the hard work and great effort you have put forth to receive your diplomas. I regard you as all my boys, and I want to do anything for you that I can do at any time."

Valdettory Address.

Albert Hammond Staton, noted star of the gridiron, delivered the valedictory address of the class on the subject, "The Technical Spirit," which he declared to be the spirit of constructive building. "Hard work and high standards of scholarship represent the spirit of Tech," declared the famous star of the Golden Tornado, "and this spirit at the college leads to success in one's life work. Here in Tech we study the laws of nature; the finest sort of culture a man can have is a knowledge of these laws. The atmosphere of Georgia Tech is one of upbuilding and of making the greatest use of ourselves to our fellow men."

PURE VINEGARS

OVER THREE SCORE KILLED BY STORM

While Total Is Expected to Mount Still Higher as Search for Bodies Continues.

New York, June 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Morgues and undertakers of the metropolitan area tonight held the bodies of more than three score men, women and children—victims of yesterday's brief cyclonic thunderstorm.

Marine police, grappling in Pelham bay and Long Island sound off City Island, where the greatest toll was taken among Sunday canoeists and fishermen predicted they would find at least a score—enough to push the death toll past eighty. Eye witnesses of the swift tragedy placed the number even higher.

At least 250 canoes, rowboats and small motorboats were bobbing about off the island, when the storm came screaming on the coast at a velocity of eighty miles an hour or better. Occupants of the little craft, sensing their danger, made a run for shelter. But scarcely had they got under way when they were engulfed in a blinding storm of rain and hail.

Only Five Minutes. As quickly as it had come, the storm vanished. It had lasted less than five minutes. But scarcely a dozen of the 250 small craft had survived. Horror-stricken, but helpless to aid, the crowds on the beach and about the Casino pier saw scores of men and women clinging to wrecked and overturned craft in the choppy sound at bay. One by one, they gave up the struggle, and dropped quietly on to be carried out toward the open sea by the tide. Some of the bodies, the police say, probably never will be recovered. The tide, turning, brought more than a score of them back today. Eye witnesses estimated there were between 600 and 750 persons in the wrecked craft. Heroic work by the United States life guards, members of nearby yacht clubs and volunteers from the shore crowd saved hundreds.

Rescuing Survivors. Among the first to put out were Jack Murray, J. C. Bower, Jack Malloy and Frank Wartinger. Manning two small motorboats, they saved more than a dozen men and women whom they found clinging to overturned canoes and rowboats. They were followed by others, and soon more than fifty craft of all sorts were out, dragging to safety the survivors of the disaster. A score of more saved themselves by clinging to the sides of Cornelius Vanderbilt's schooner yacht.

The waters had been cleared by daylight of all the living, but the search for the dead continued through the night. Guided by the searchlight of the policeboat John F. Hyman, a score of boats cruised about, grappling for, and occasionally finding bodies.

Meantime, chaos reigned on shore. "Where darkness descended" unbroken by the usual glare of electric lights. The island power plant had been put out of commission by the storm, as had been the telephone and telegraph lines.

Temporary Morgue. Mothers, fathers, and wives of the missing besieged the police station where a temporary morgue had been set up—gazing fearfully at the faces of the dead by the flickering light of candles and lanterns. Others crowded the wreck-stricken beach waiting for the rescue boats to come in with more bodies.

Fresh crowds hurried to the island today, when the first news of the tragedy through the morning newspapers. Police directed them to the Bronx morgue, where the 34 bodies so far recovered had been removed.

Other Deaths. The City Island calamity, while the greatest, was not the only havoc wrought by the storm. Pending investigation a charge of homicide was lodged against Paul Simon, owner of the 75-foot ferry wheel at Clason Point Park, in the Bronx, which was blown from its base and hurled its sixty occupants on the beach of Long Island Sound in a tangle of steel wreckage. Seven were killed and 27 injured.

More than a score of isolated drownings, electrocutions by touching fallen wires and deaths beneath falling trees were reported from various parts of the Metropolitan area.

EUROPE RECOVERING FAST, SAYS JACOBS

European nations are recovering rapidly from the disastrous effects of the war and their progress in many instances is remarkable. According to Sinclair Jacobs, vice president of the American Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a six weeks' tour of Europe. He was accompanied by Mrs. Jacobs and one of the interesting features of the trip was a visit to the battlefields of France and Belgium.

"The spirit of the people over Europe is amazing," Mr. Jacobs said. "There is one outstanding thing about this spirit and that is that the people over there have had an ample sufficiency of war and its accompanying horrors."

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs visited the Chateau Thierry district and also Blois, Brussels, Cologne, Frankfurt and other cities. While in Europe, Mr. Jacobs combined business with pleasure, examining large stocks of dolls and Christmas novelties and making large purchases for the Jacobs' interests.

Lupton Hall, of Oglethorpe university, erected through the generosity of J. T. Lupton of Chattanooga, is to be the depository of a library of southern literature. Harry E. Harman, well-known business man of Atlanta, has donated his services and will gather books, magazines, old southern newspapers, pamphlets and pictures.

In expressing his desire to make this the largest collection of literature of its kind in the south, President Thornwell Jacobs requests all friends of the university to forward any volumes they may have to Mr. Harman, of 402 Trust Company of Georgia building.

Right of Georgia to condemn land for roads upheld. The state's right to condemn land for highway purposes provided in the act of the legislature creating the state highway department has been upheld in a case decided by Judge M. C. Tarver, of Whitfield county. It was announced Monday by Attorney-General George M. Napier. A strip of land 3,100 feet long was condemned and suit was brought to test the law. Assistant Attorney-General Seward M. Smith handled the case and the decision of Judge Tarver was in favor of the state. The case will be appealed to the supreme court to get a final ruling on the constitutionality of the law.

Expect recovery of airmen hurt in Augusta fall. Augusta, Ga., June 12.—Chances for the recovery of Lieutenant Richard T. Aldworth, of Los Angeles, who suffered a fractured skull and lacerations about the body when the airplane he was piloting crashed to earth at Old Camp Hancock here yesterday, were brighter this morning, although his condition was still serious. Major E. H. Brainard, who was carried as a passenger, received a fractured arm and about the face when the plane fell. The accident was attributed to engine trouble.

MRS. HELEN GOBER, WHO ATTEMPTED SUICIDE, BETTER

The condition of Mrs. Helen Gober, 18 years old, of 498 1-2 Whitehall street, who attempted suicide Monday morning by taking a large quantity of nitrate of soda, was slightly improved late Monday night, according to physicians at the Grady hospital.

A note left by Mrs. Gober, addressed to her husband, indicated worry over domestic troubles caused her to seek relief in death. It read: "My Darling Husband: I could stand it any longer. I grieve all night long. I hope you will forgive me for what I am going to do, but remember that I love you better than anybody in the world."

Mrs. Gober was found in an unconscious condition in her room by Mrs. Jerry Griffith and Mrs. W. P. Denison, both of whom have apartments in the same building with Mrs. Gober. Call Officers J. G. Bowman and F. A. Newport were told by them that Mr. and Mrs. Gober had a quarrel Sunday afternoon, and he left, saying he intended to file suit against his wife for a divorce.

NO CONFERENCE IS NOW EXPECTED IN TANLAC CASE

Advices received in Atlanta Monday by friends of litigants in the Tanlac case indicate that there will be no conference between S. A. Lynch, majority stockholder in International Proprietary, S. G. McDuffie, president of the organization, and S. G. Satterthwait, a stockholder in the company.

Mr. Lynch denied that he was in New York for a conference with Mr. McDuffie and Mr. Satterthwait, according to later dispatches received here. He stated that there was nothing to arbitrate and the first he knew of the presence in New York of the other two principals, was when he was called over telephone at the Hotel Vanderbilt by them and asked to meet them.

Owing to the fact that all three principals in the case were out of the city Monday, friends expressed the belief that they were holding a conference with a view of settling their differences out of court.

Dainty Little Movie Actress Entertains Crippled Children

Miriam Battista, the "Little Ray of Sunshine" of the screen, who is appearing personally in Atlanta, lived up to her name Monday when she presented as hostess of a special theater party for 25 little tots from the Scottish Rite hospital for crippled children at the Grand theater.

Needless to say the children thoroughly enjoyed the opportunity of meeting personally and seeing the little queen of the movies appear on the stage. After the performance, the youngsters who occupied boxes on the lower floor, were escorted "back stage" to the green room where little Miss Battista presided as hostess. Ice cream, cake and other refreshments were served. Mrs. Battista, mother of Miriam and Mrs. Thomas H. James, wife of Manager James of the Grand, assisting in serving.

Attired in a becoming little frock of pinkish hue and with her hair of locks of black hair falling loosely upon her shoulders the little hostess presented a charming picture both on and off the stage. She demonstrated her ability as a finished child actress and completely captivated the hearts of the little admirers from the hospital.

"I am never so happy than when I am with kiddies my own age," Miriam told the Constitution reporter. "Just because I am thrown so much with persons much older than myself in my work that doesn't mean that I have stopped getting enjoyment from playing with dolls and children."

Miriam has been in moving pictures ever since she was five years old. She was born in New York and is of Italian ancestry. She has appeared in more than 100 moving pictures than perhaps any other child actress here.

"I love my work," she replied in answer to a question. "Some day I expect to be a famous screen star like Norma Talmadge. Norma is my favorite among the female stars. I think Rudolph Valentino is handsome of the whole celebrities."

Miriam will appear daily and in the evening at the Grand theater during this week. She is on her way to California with her mother, where she expects at an early date to begin work in a new feature picture, the name of which has not been determined as yet.

COMPRESS CO. LEASES CANDLER WAREHOUSE

Announcement was made Monday that the Shippers Compress company, with offices in the Candler building, has leased the Candler warehouse on Stewart avenue, and will install there one of the largest compressing plants in the south.

Details of the transaction, which is said to be one of the largest real estate leases ever made in Atlanta, were not given in the announcement. Possession of the 40 acre structure will be taken by the lessee July 1, it was stated. The amount involved in the lease will probably exceed $100,000 per year. It was stated unofficially.

Officials of the Shippers Compress company include W. H. Glenn, president; John A. Manget, vice president, and J. W. Nix, secretary and treasurer.

Another important real estate transaction Monday was the announcement by Ben J. Mosel, the erection on Stewart avenue at Whitehall street, of a two-story brick building that will cost approximately $80,000. Actual work on this building was begun Monday and it will be completed about September 1, it was stated.

CITY PLANNING BOARD ANNOUNCES CHANGES

The city planning commission Monday afternoon approved a petition by residents and property owners calling for an amendment to the zoning law converting that portion of Luckie street from Pine to North avenue from apartment to business classification, and on Plum from Pine to North avenue, from apartment to industrial. This joins up with the industrial zone which includes Marietta street.

Property owners requested the law amended so as to reclassify about 80 acres in the industrial zone near Moseley park along the A. B. & A. railroad into a residential district. The request was approved.

After about 20 citizens had protested, the commission disapproved a proposed amendment changing from a residential to an apartment district the block bounded by Luckie avenue, Dargan street, Greenwich avenue and Holder street.

The commission also addressed a petition requesting an amendment changing the northern corner of Highland avenue and Blue Ridge avenue from apartment to business zone.

Plats for Urban hills, near Inman yards, and Lookout view, on the river car line, subdivisions, were approved.

COFFEE FARMERS SAY MASKED MEN KIDNAPED THEM

Douglas, Ga., June 12.—County authorities today were trying to round up members of a mob of masked men alleged by C. B. Boggin and Dewey Grantham, young farmers near Douglas, to have called them from their homes and severely flogged them Saturday night.

Boggin and Grantham told officials that they were summoned on a pretense that the sheriff wished to speak to them. They were seized by fifteen masked men, they said, blindfolded and with pistols forced to go to a place half a mile distant where the flogging took place.

Authorities said that recently Boggin had trouble with a neighbor over a family dispute.

Movie Is Burned.

McDonough, Ga., June 12.—(Special.)—Fire destroyed the moving picture theater in the Copeland block here last night, with damages of two or three thousand dollars. The entire movie outfit was consumed, building barely being saved, and but for good work of the volunteer fire department the whole eastern side of Public square would have been swept away. The origin of the fire is unknown, as the show had been on an hour and no one was in the building.

Hager Declares U.S. Prison Probe Will Be Pushed

Before leaving Atlanta Monday for Washington, where he was called on another matter, United States District Attorney Clint Hager, issued a statement in which he declared the investigations of the "dope ring" at the Atlanta federal prison would continue until every civil employee at the penitentiary had been examined and the corrupt conditions said to exist there completely barred.

Mr. Hager also took occasion to reply to charges made Saturday by Frank A. Doughman, counsel for the three guards, J. B. Dean, R. H. Massey and J. H. Owen, who were arrested Friday in connection with the ring, in which Mr. Doughman claimed that the district attorney was attempting to try the cases through the columns of the newspapers.

"We have examined more than 100 persons in connection with the dope ring at the prison," Mr. Hager stated, "and have secured a great mass of information. In addition to the disclosures made in the narcotic situation, we have discovered that other reprehensible practices have been going on at the prison for some time. These include graft, bribery, and a crime that is unpardonable."

"I am not at all concerned that one Frank Doughman seems disconcerted at the manner in which this investigation has been conducted. We are getting results and that is more important than pleasing or displeasing Mr. Doughman, who should be rendering the government aid to stop wholesale drug selling at the penitentiary to unfortunate inmates. Instead, he is endeavoring to impede the investigation by his attitude expressed. Doughman is the attorney representing some of the accused men. I do not believe Doughman is at all sincere in his criticism and if we could read his honest, secret meditations, they would probably be: 'God bless the officials who indict my clients.'"

ENGLISH TO LOOK INTO NAVAL PACT

Washington, June 12.—The British government, as it was learned authoritatively here today, has decided to ratify all of the treaties negotiated at the recent Washington conference with the exception of the naval treaty, by simple act of the privy council and without submission to either house of parliament.

The naval treaty is regarded as proper for consideration by the parliament, not directly but in the form of a bill to give effect to its provisions, for the reason that authorization must be had for the scrapping of many ships and other reductions and changes in the naval establishment involving appropriations.

In communicating this information to Washington it has been stated that the house of commons had already been advised of the government's purpose and it is understood that final ratification of the other treaties will be delayed only until the naval treaty has received the sanction of parliament.

PROVED IN EVERY AGE IMPROVED TODAY

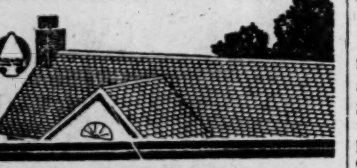

Biblical history has it that Noah coated the ark with "pitch" within and without. Noah's secret is lost in antiquity, but every succeeding age has known the weather-proofing qualities of mineral pitch.

Natural asphalt—a form of pitch—is a standard waterproofing material today. Thickly coated over a base of asphalt-saturated felt, it gives Flex-A-Tile Roofing Products their exceptional strength and durability.

NAVY BOARD HUNTING FOR BOOTLEGGERS

Norfolk, Va., June 12.—Officers and men of the naval transport Sirius today are being given customary liberty while a naval board of investigation, headed by Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, commandant of the Norfolk navy yard is endeavoring to place the blame for the presence aboard the ship of 87 cases of liquor, discovered in the cargo, unloaded by the transport at the navy yard Saturday. The Sirius had just put in from a West Indian port.

It is the belief of Admiral Hugh Rodman, commandant of the fifth naval district, that in the finding of the liquor, the naval authorities have crossed the trail of a far-reaching and powerful liquor ring, headquarters of which may be at Norfolk.

Only a few naval men, Admiral Rodman believes, are implicated. Behind him he sees the shadow of an organization, having considerable capital and with agents stationed in foreign ports.

"Until the efforts of the board of investigation result in throwing suspicion upon some members of the Sirius crew," Admiral Rodman said today, "no steps will be taken against enlisted men or officers. There are upwards of 250 men aboard the ship and with the probability that only a few know anything about the liquor, it would be obviously unfair to deprive all of liberty. The investigation, however, will be searching and the guilty, when proven so, will be severely punished."

Say Miss Cheek Asks a Divorce From Seimmons

Report Has It That Wife No. 2, Also Suing, Is Named Correspondent.

Savannah, Ga., June 12.—(Special.) Miss Lota Cheek, New York stage beauty, named by Mrs. E. C. Seimmons in her petition for annulment of marriage with F. L. Seimmons, has filed suit for divorce from Mr. Seimmons, naming Mrs. E. C. Seimmons as co-respondent, according to a report current here today.

W. R. Sanderson, attorney representing Mrs. E. C. Seimmons, has secured Miss Cheek's address from her father, and has written to her asking for a sworn statement of her connection with the alleged conjugal triangle.

It was impossible here today to confirm the report that Miss Cheek had started divorce action against Mr. Seimmons but attorneys connected with the case are making an effort to procure a court record. It is reported that action has been started either in New York or New England by Miss Cheek.

It was ascertained definitely today that Miss Cheek is appearing in "Make It Snappy," a musical comedy promoted by the Schuberts at the Winter Garden and that her residence address is 118 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

Mrs. Seimmons recently began a suit for divorce in Chatham superior court against Mr. Seimmons and then changed her action to petition for annulment of her marriage on grounds that he had another wife living. The appearance of a newspaper in the court room with a picture of Miss Cheek, announcing that she had won a Boston beauty contest, caused Mrs. Seimmons to ask a continuance to give her attorneys time to investigate the alleged marriage of the pretty actress to Mr. Seimmons.

Miss Cheek formerly resided in Dawson, Ga., where her parents now live and where she is well known.

Governor Establishes Precedent; He Appoints Woman Normal Trustee

Athens, Ga., June 12.—(Special.) Announcement was made tonight that Governor Hardwick has appointed Mrs. J. E. Hayes, of Montezuma, as a member of the board of trustees of the State Normal school.

Mrs. Hayes is the first woman to be appointed to the board of trustees to any of the state institutions. For a number of years J. E. Hayes was on the State Normal school board and now his wife becomes a member.

Mrs. Hayes has not only taken an interest in educational matters throughout the state, but for a number of years she has shown a keen interest in work alone at the State Normal school, and will no doubt in her new capacity be able to render even greater service to this school.

Fashionable persons in ancient Athens slept under coverlets of dressed peacock skins, with the feathers on.

London Welcomes Lady Astor Home From Tour of U.S.

London, June 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Viscountess Astor was hailed with "a very good fellow" by a gathering of four hundred at a dinner given today by the English speaking union to accord the first woman to take her seat as a member of the house of commons a welcome home after her American tour.

Mrs. Wintringham, who shares the honor of feminine representation in parliament with the Viscountess, united with Lord Lee of Parham in saying nice things about the guest of honor's work in parliament and the unofficial mission she performed recently in America.

The English speaking union is the only Anglo-American fellowship society which admits women to membership, and they were present in force to hear the two women members on the first occasion they have spoken from the same table. Viscountess Astor was attired in a lemon-colored gown with green girlish neck. In characteristic fashion she sermonized, admonished and joked for an hour. In her peroration she alluded to the Washington conference, said:

"America had a chance to build the greatest navy in the world; she gave it up with as much grace as the emperor of the world gave up his title on the day of the signing of the peace treaty."

VARIETY PLAYERS APPEAR TONIGHT FOR RESCUE HOME

The Variety players are making their final Atlanta appearances in the comedy hit, "Oh! What A Night," at St. Philip's chapter house, East Hunter and Washington streets, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The performance to be given Tuesday evening is for the benefit of the American Rescue Workers home, at 20 Capitol avenue.

Director Van Buren says that the cast of this performance will be the very best that the Variety players can offer. They are: Mildred Head succeeds Louise Duncan as Mary Campbell, the school teacher, and Myrtle Embury succeeds Laura Speaks as Mrs. Donovan, the housekeeper.

The remainder of the cast follows: J. Michael Dugan, as Bob O'Neil, sheriff of Rawhide county, Arizona; William Herbert Brantham as Laddie O'Neil, the young mischievous brother; Gladys Speaks as Joan Corrigan, the wealthy rancher's daughter; William Lyon as Gad, the mischievous orphan; Thomas Brownlee as Grizzley Adams, a typical wild westerner; Harold K. Van Buren as Father O'Neil.

HARDING TO HALT HENRY FORD DEAL

Washington, June 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—President Harding is understood to have taken a determined stand today against action by congress at this time on pending bills for disposal of the government's nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

The views of the president, as outlined, it was stated, to Representative Mondell, Wyoming, the republican leader, at the white house, were conveyed to the republican steering committee, charged with the task of framing the legislative program of the house. Members of the committee declined to indicate whether they would recommend action on the bills or let the whole question go over until the December session.

There was no intimation as to how the president regarded the proposal of Henry Ford for lease of the property beyond the statement that he felt the matter was too big to be considered hurriedly and in what members regard as the closing period of the present congress.

"No," she said quietly, "I must leave it on the way."

"Where?"

"That is for you to find out."

His look suggested his ears must have deceived him.

"I mean," Carlotta amended, "we must find a good place on the way."

"Get in," he said brusquely, and took the seat the wheel beside her. Leaving her refuge of the night, Marston swung off to the left. It was a clear road untouched by fire, and in that direction, it appeared to him, the Carrington estate lay. They had traveled some miles when Carlotta broke the silence. "You haven't found the place yet," she reminded him.

"You try," he responded, still with eyes front.

Soon she touched his elbow. His eyes followed her hand guiding to a house ahead on the right. It was white and rambling, two stories with an ell, and altogether comfortable in its appearance. As he shut off the engine the front door swung open. A meager little woman, with bright, black eyes, stood there, examining them with undisguised curiosity. She saw a man in evening clothes soiled and scorched, with an expanse of shirt-front disreputably dirty. With the instinct of her sex Carlotta sought to propitiate the appraising eye. But smoke and a night in the open had marred a dress once delightful. The child in her soiled blanket looked sweet and clean; she did not seem even to resent lack of customary nourishment.

"I wonder if we can get some breakfast here?" Marston asked.

"You're from the city, I guess," the woman said.

"Yes," he admitted.

"Come right in. We had breakfast a long while ago. But I guess I can scare up something."

The woman guided them, as she chattered, to a sitting room comfortable in a homely fashion. "You must be all beat out. Such a night! And feelin' for the child, too. She's a good little thing. How old is she?"

More closely than her casual examiner, Marston observed Carlotta's slight hesitation as she answered: "About two."

"Your first one, I suppose," the woman pursued.

"Yes," said Carlotta.

Something in her voice indicated distaste for the line of inquiry pursued. Evidently the farmer's wife found a reason for it, and she hurried off to get the breakfast.

"You must ask her to take the baby for a few days, when she comes back," Carlotta spoke with restraint, not looking up.

"Why?"

"Because she would expect the request to come from you."

"I refuse."

Carlotta and Marston relaxed as the housewife came through the door. She bore a tray which she deposited with satisfaction. "There," she said, "draw up."

Both ate with relish. And as they breakfasted their hostess pursued her honestly curious inquiry. "Are you joinin' far?"

"Not a great distance." It was Carlotta who answered.

"Maybe it's a place I know—"

"Near Oakhurst," said Carlotta.

"You mean the place where some big game named Carrington live? Up there by the lake? Well, I want to know!"

For a moment the woman seemed bent on closer identification of their destination; but there was something she burned to impart. "It beats all," she observed, "what happened last night."

"Yes," said Marston, appreciatively swallowing a last mouthful. "It was exciting."

"As if it wasn't enough," she went on, "to burn up all Saleport. There was a fire on the hill right in our pasture."

"Did it?" Marston was interested now.

"As sure as you're settin' there. On a big rock in the pasture by the road. Seth, that's my man, found it when he turned the cows in this mornin'."

"Anybody hurt?"

"That's the funniest part of it. Whoever was in that airplane has disappeared. And Seth said there wasn't any blood; nothin' at all but a funny lookin' cap with a name we can't read, inside. Only we could make out, 'Paris.' It beats all, don't it?"

"It does seem strange," Marston allowed. Then to Carlotta: "Don't you think we should go on now?" He turned again to the woman: "We are much indebted to you, Mrs. —"

"Patch," she supplied promptly. "I don't feel you're beholden to me a bit. I always like to do a neighborly service."

Carlotta cut in.

"Since you have been so kind, Mrs. Patch, my husband and I wondered if you could look after the little one for a day or two. You see—as the woman looked surprised and doubtful—we are going to impose on the hospitality of friends with a house full of guests. They'll take us in, I know; but may find children not their own a nuisance. I can see you are fond of them."

"Well, I don't know," said the woman uncertainly. "You see, Mrs. —"

"Marston," Carlotta supplied promptly.

"It's been quite a while since my own left the nest," the housewife continued, "and maybe I've lost my knack. But I am fond of babies; and yours is such a little dear. Maybe I could keep her a day or two, to accommodate you."

Carlotta began buttoning her gloves. Quite casually she turned to Marston: "Have you any money, Dick, you can leave with Mrs. Patch?"

"I'll see," he said, for the moment too full of astonishment in the deception to entertain anger.

"Don't bother," Mrs. Patch interposed. "I don't want any money. I guess I don't run any risk. You don't look like child deserters. 'Twould be a hard-hearted one to run away from this little precious."

The child was sleeping, obvious of the world.

"What's her name?" asked the farmer's wife as she touched a flushed cheek lightly.

Carlotta seemed to ignore them equally. But her decision was not in doubt. With eyes only for her precious burden, she walked to the car. The man from the house took it like a soldier at the last. With no backward look, he went, very slowly, into the dark shell of a home. Marston looked down the hillside, and saw the fire lunge as if it followed a fuse. Already it was sweeping past them, and closing in upon the line of escape. A few swift strides, and he reached the car. No word was spoken as he moved into the driver's seat. Encumbered as she was, Carlotta stepped in beside him. He pressed a button, and the car started as if it knew the road.

Though it was quite dark, with all street lights extinguished and a vast smoke screen veiling the moon, Marston kept the car at high speed. He had no clear consciousness of the road, as he crouched at the wheel, with every ounce of energy concentrated in instinctive exertion. The air was full of sparks, and heavy with smoke. Marston could not see the fire. But his ears were aware of its roaring. It grew louder in sudden acceleration. And a flicker of red was revealed in the blurry windshield. Lungs seemed to suspend their function in the furious heat, and the impact of air at terrific speed. Now they were near the foot of a hill. Marston fiercely pressed for the car's last atom of power, as the unmistakable odor of burning rubber came to his agonized consciousness. A fiery tongue extended over a wall, licked a juniper bush just ahead. For a moment they rode blinded in a red haze. Marston was vaguely conscious of crossroads in which he had no opportunity of selection. They dashed straight ahead—into sudden coolness. He had checked the car's speed. Marston realized they were skirting acres of ploughed ground. But the fire halted at its border—impotent. He brought the car to a stop before a great gate. Through its bars he discerned a cemetery. "Shall we rest here?" he asked Carlotta, still mute as in their desperate dash through the flames.

"If you wish," she assented. And they drove in. They paused under a great tree. When Marston alighted, turned to assist Carlotta, he saw how drawn and white her face was. She accepted unquestioning his steady hands. But as he sought to draw her to him, she stiffened against his encircling arm.

"No, please don't—" Her eyes were fixed on her sleeping burden.

"Forgive me," he said.

With bitter eyes he watched her tender handling of the child, a little girl of two or three years. It was a new Carlotta that Marston saw. She felt his eyes upon her, and she spoke, a little nervously, without lifting her own. "You see, I never can resist a baby. There was one I lost. . . . It almost broke my heart."

"Carlotta!" To his own ears his voice sounded harsh and strange.

"What is it?" Clinging the child more closely, she stepped back at him.

"I must know."

"I am so tired," she sighed.

"You torture me."

"How?" she asked, but seemed to shrink from his answer.

"The child, and that man."

"I do not understand."

A great bitterness came upon him. "Do you think I am made of stone?"

She flinched and half turned away. "Another time," she promised. "There is so much to explain, and I am—so tired."

As she finished her voice broke with fatigue, and she swayed uncertainly. Tenderly he supported her as she sprang to support her. "Darling," he murmured, and pressed his lips upon her hair.

She did not resist, but relaxed against him, murmuring "I'm so tired."

"Sit here," with peremptory solicitude he supported her to a seat under the great oak, and took his place beside her. Carlotta drew the child closer, and Marston took both within the circle of his arms. At first Carlotta did not wholly yield. But soon irresistible weariness overcame her. Presently her head came to rest on his shoulder. She relaxed, with what seemed a little sigh of content. Peace flooded his heart. From dreamy half consciousness he, too, passed into the realm of sleep.

CHAPTER V.

Misunderstanding.

Marston was first called from the heavy slumber of exhaustion. At the appointed time night struck its tent. Carlotta opened her eyes, and in them dawned a look of wonder. "Where am I?" she asked.

"Home," Marston answered tenderly.

With remembrance rich color flooded her cheeks. In a quick movement she left the support of his arms. Then her eyes fell as his look reproached her. "Thank you so much," she said hurriedly—"for everything."

"It's not thanks I want."

"I don't know what you mean."

"I'd rather not mention it."

"But why," in a final effort, "all this secrecy?"

"Because I wish it."

"Very well," he said stiffly.

When they reached the house, Carrington appeared. It was not a very picked over the traces. His great chance, I suppose, to spurge. Beautiful woman killed in house of New York millionaire. And Baumgarten—that's the little ass's name—gloried as the fearless prosecutor. If he gets one of us, so much the better! More publicity for him than if they arrest a tramp."

"What's he got to go on?" With resolute care Marston kept his voice even.

"How do I know? He had the impudence to cross-examine servants before I knew he was here. We've all been through the mill. Amy has been under the harrow, and Roger and the general. Even Freddy. They are all upstairs now, aching, I suppose, to get away. They haven't had a good time; but I've had it over with."

"All right, Helen is trying to keep the beggar out of mischief now."

Miss Frances Park Becomes Bride Of Maj. C. J. Mathews

Macon, Ga., June 12.—(Special)—The marriage of Miss Frances Park to Major Clifford J. Mathews, U. S. A., was a brilliant event of this evening, taking place at 9 o'clock at the Mulberry Street Methodist church and followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Park, on College street.

Rev. T. D. Ellis officiated. Miss Elmyr Park, younger sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were her cousins, Miss Sara Colpepper, of Greenville, Ga.; Miss Mary Battle Lowry and Miss Mary Taylor.

The groomsmen were Orville Park, Jr., brother of the bride; Grafton Smith, Willard Murphy and George Mathews, of Fort Valley. Sam Mathews, of Macon, was the groom's best man.

The ushers were Robert J. Flournoy and Tom Marcy.

Little Ruth Squire Grace, tiny daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Grace, Jr., and Miss Edith Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Johnson, were flower girls, and Master Terry Adams Murray and Master Albert Adams, Jr., were train-bearers.

Beautiful Bride.
The bride presented a picture of radiant loveliness in her exquisite bridal robe of ivory white satin. The underlining was pleated and made short with four panels hanging three inches below. These were heavily embroidered and beaded in iridescent roses. A full court train of the plain satin was worn and falling from the back of the head was a misty tulle veil of ruffled folds, held in place by a coronet of blossoms in ruche effect. The blossoms were a gorgeous shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony a reception was held. In the receiving party were the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Park, Captain and Mrs. James Mathews, of Fort Valley, parents of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Taylor.

Misses Camille Lamar, Fredonia Truizer and Anita Davis, assisted by the bridesmaids, served punch.

"The bride is one of the most attractive personalities and has a wide circle of friends and admirers."

Miss Park studied at Lucy Cobb in Athens, later attending the Scoville school and Deverell French school in New York city. Miss Park possesses an exquisite dramatic soprano. She was studied with Mme. Eleanor McLellan in New York city during the past several years and also with Walter Kleisewetter, noted grand opera coach.

Wedding Trip.

Major Mathews studied at the Georgia School of Technology in Atlanta, later attending West Point Military academy, where he was graduated in 1917. During the world war he rendered much valuable service at various posts in the United States. During the past two years he has been commandant at Lanier High school.

The young couple left at a late hour for a trip of several weeks to New York and Canada and on their return will be in Macon for a few days before going to Camp McClellan at Annapolis, A. S., for several months.

The rooms were decorated with ferns and palms.

Lovely Bride.
The bride was attractively gowned in blue canton crepe embroidered in honna. Her hat was of honna straw, trimmed with the same shade of feathers. Her corsage was of white orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Meakin, mother of the bride, wore blue canton crepe, and Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, mother of the groom, wore black canton crepe.

Mrs. E. C. Strother, the bride's grandmother, wore black silk with point lace.

Miss Emma Hall, the groom's aunt, wore a gown of blue crepe de chine.

Little Miss Sophie Lou Meakin, sister of the bride, wore white crepe de chine.

Misses Elizabeth and Roxie Reid wore white georgette crepe and pale blue crepe, respectively.

W. H. Parker was best man.

Reception Follows.
After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast, served buffet, was enjoyed. The bride and groom will spend their wedding trip in the mountains of North Carolina, and on their return, will be at home to their friends on North Jackson street.

The bride is one of the prettiest and most charming members in the younger set. Her attractive personality has won her many friends. She has often sponsored Tech football games, was civil crew sponsor for two years, and also was an R. O. T. C. sponsor. After receiving her education at Agnes Scott college, she finished at the University of Georgia.

Muddy Garments.

If you are splashed with mud, let it dry on the garment. Try brushing it off with a whisk broom and if that will not remove it, try scratching it off with the edge of a penny. This is just sharp enough to do the work without injuring the material.

Child's Flower Garden

By Mrs. E. P. Crenshaw.

Children are very fond of flowers and are attracted by them when quite young. Their only desire seems to be to pick them to pieces unless they are taught better.

I have had my flowers ruthlessly plucked by children who loved them.
I did not try to find out who took them, because I was sure it was bitten.

Jake's mother had a large front yard and a large plot at the back of the house, but she had never thought of letting the flower-hungry boy grow his own flowers.

Give the child a small piece of ground "to have and to hold" as his or her very own. Please do not give them a plot so poor and hard that ragweeds will not grow on it. Show them how to spade deeply and fertilize well, for that is the most important part of the game. I am not surprised that children become discouraged and say that they have no "luck" with flowers because the conditions under which they try would discourage anybody.

Some flowers just will bloom under any conditions. It is their business to do so.

Ten cents buys a package of zinnia seed and great armfuls of blossoms can be gathered from them all summer.
Plenty for the sick friends and plenty to make the house cheerful and plenty some flower hungry child whose mother did not grow them.

Some years ago I happened to see one of my neighbor's children in my yard gathering my most beautiful flowers. The way he picked my best sellers showed he had given thought to the task in hand. After picking to his heart's content, he ran toward home, but was met by an irate mother with a big switch in her hand.
I ran to the boy and begged for him, but the mother did not like to have me "take up" for Jake in wrongdoing. Finally she promised not to thrash him this time if he never would do it again.

I was thankful for this respite, for I had resolved to give Jake all the flowers he wanted and thus keep him from taking them and the whipping.

In a few days the boy was taken sick and soon died. The flowers sent to the funeral were costly and beautiful, but they could give Jake no pleasure.

The fate in my heart that always plays when a good deed is done was busy the day Jake was buried, for I could see in memory the joy on his face as he plucked my flowers under the teacher at school. You can sow the seed right out in the open ground, for I am speaking now of hardy flowers and things easy to grow.

Petunias grow quickly; also marigold.

Sweet Williams are quite showy, and when grown in masses make a gorgeous flower bed.

Acting and anemones are harder to get started, but repay every effort put forth in their cultivation.

Nasturtiums and sweet alyssum make pretty borders.

Flax comes on quickly and grow well under favorable conditions.

Try some of these easily grown flowers the first season and every year add some new flowers to your garden collection.

Mrs. Edgar P. Metcalf honored Mrs.

Jane Perkins, daughter of Mr. and

The house was attractively decorated with quantities of field daisies and nasturtiums. The center decoration for the table was "the bride" and satchel, covered with white crepe paper and decorated with small wedding bells and rings and "just married" signs in miniature. Extending from the inside of the satchel at each end were many white ribbon streamers. Tied to the end of each ribbon and lying on the table, was a useful gift for the bride.

An interesting contest, "Our Home,"

Worn Out After She Cooked A Meal.
Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read the Result.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—"I suffered for a year with nervous troubles and irregularities before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back pained all the time and I was unfit for housework. I was worn out when I cooked a meal, and was unable to do my washing. My girl friends and my sister told me if I would take your Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills I would be relieved. After taking the first bottle I felt better, and neglected it awhile, but found I could not do my work until I was stronger. So I took the Vegetable Compound again and now I am the mother of a 15 months old boy. He is fat and healthy and I am sure I could never have carried him if it had not been for your medicine. I recommend your medicine to all women although I am young to be advising some of the older women. My husband, Perry, 818 W. Liberty St., Cincinnati, Ohio."

Camp Highland Swimming Pool Is Dedicated

An event of Monday afternoon was the dedication of the Y. W. C. A. camp swimming pool that was held at the "Y" camp, at Highland, Ga. Camp Highland is 12 miles from Atlanta on the Southern Railway. The representative body of women who attended left the terminal station for Highland at 2:30 o'clock and spent the afternoon at the camp. The dedication service was held on the banks of the new swimming pool that is 45 by 90 feet, with a depth of from 3 to 8 feet. Mrs. Charles A. Konkin, chairman of the camp committee, told the story of the camp that was purchased by the association in 1917 as the country home of Dr. J. G. Earnest of Atlanta, and of how the girls who had gone to Camp Highland, summer after summer, and enjoyed the natural swimming hole in Nickajack Creek that flows through the camp grounds, and hoped each season that the next season would have a concrete swimming pool for Camp Highland.

Mrs. Konkin told of how, with the aid of her camp committee, she had established in 1921 what is known as the "Y. W. C. A. Camp Swimming Pool Fund." She listed the donations to the fund as follows: Mrs. Frank M. Inman, co-chairman with Mrs. Konkin, had earned $600 for the fund by the sale of two lots in Peachtree Heights, the sale having been made a short time before Mrs. Inman was injured in a recent automobile accident. Mrs. Konkin explained that E. Rivers, of the Rivers Realty company, had given to Mrs. Inman and herself the right to sell lots in Peachtree Heights, their commission, including his, to be used for the camp pool fund. The speaker stated that Mrs. Inman's successful sales headed the list in donations to the fund. She had not only personally shown the lots to her purchasers, but by her business ability and personality had closed the sales.

Other Donations.
Other donations are that following the 1922 production of "The Follies," the Junior League donated $500 to the fund; Y. W. C. A. girls who go to camp season after season raised $110; William J. Davis donated $100; Lewis Beck $20; S. A. Lynch $100; William Healey, $100; J. S. Akers, $50; Mrs. Ed Inman, $40; Mrs. James Nunally, $25; The Atlanta Writer's club gave $90 to the fund, their proceeds from a Harry Stillwell Edwards' lecture that the club promoted; Mrs. Bolling Jones, $5; Mrs. John McDougald, $5; Mrs. M. Robinson, $25; McDougald Construction company, $25; E. O. Kellum, $25. The latest donation was a check for $100 sent by Mrs. W. H. Healey.

Mrs. Konkin stated that the camp committee had personally donated to the fund and had also promoted several large rummage sales. In explaining the cost of the pool, she said that owing to the rock that impedes Nickajack Creek, much excavating was done and that future plans include a dam for the creek that will be an addition to the cost. In conclusion, Mrs. Konkin said that the new pool is safe for all girls, the young swimmer as well as the beginner, its depth of eight feet being the extent and that two expert swimmers, Miss Lucy Marvin Adams and Miss Pauline Martin, are always in the pool with the girls, the time of swimming being limited to two hours daily.

Mrs. Archibald Davis, president of the Y. W. C. A. in accepting the pool as a gift to the association from the committee, accepted the name of "health and happiness for the girlhood of Atlanta."

Camp Inspected.
Following the service, the camp was inspected. During the afternoon and evening the service of regular monthly meeting of the Y. W. C. A. directors was held; however, the swimming pool and its beautiful surroundings of the afternoon.

"A cordial interest centers in our Y. W. C. A. camp committee and their work," stated Mrs. Archibald Davis, during the dedication service, as she explained what the camp means to the girls and young women of Atlanta, its nearby location, where any girl may go for a week-end or vacation, without the expense of the usual journey and stay at a summer resort. The camp committee includes Mrs. Konkin, chairman; Mrs. Frank Inman, co-chairman; Mesdames W. P. Hill, Howard Buckner, James Robinson, Henry Johnson, Jr., Morris Brandon, R. F. Worn Out After She Cooked A Meal.
Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read the Result.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—"I suffered for a year with nervous troubles and irregularities before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back pained all the time and I was unfit for housework. I was worn out when I cooked a meal, and was unable to do my washing. My girl friends and my sister told me if I would take your Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills I would be relieved. After taking the first bottle I felt better, and neglected it awhile, but found I could not do my work until I was stronger. So I took the Vegetable Compound again and now I am the mother of a 15 months old boy. He is fat and healthy and I am sure I could never have carried him if it had not been for your medicine. I recommend your medicine to all women although I am young to be advising some of the older women. My husband, Perry, 818 W. Liberty St., Cincinnati, Ohio."

The Involuntary Vamp by Mildred Barbour

Who's Who in the Story.

Diana Langley, who possesses to a superlative degree a quality of "fury," wished for her at birth by her youthful aunt, Marjorie Langley, herself a notable beauty, to whom Stephen Dale, a wealthy bachelor, had been devoted for years, impulsively declares her love for Dale. On being told by him that he can never marry, because of a trace of insanity in his family, Diana, out of pique, marries Alex Leigh, young navy officer, at the same time that Ted Saunders, a hopeless suitor for Diana's hand, marries Sylvia Bennett, a friend of Diana's. On her way to California with her new husband, Diana meets Lynn Johnston, an old acquaintance. They are inadvertently locked behind the locked pull out of a New Mexican town and are picked up by a dashingly handsome man, who, attracted by Diana's beauty, makes Johnston a prisoner and proposes marriage to Diana. She makes her escape only to be rescued a second time by a stranger, who proves himself undesirable. In an effort to escape, she awakens in a strange room and discovers that she has been pulled through a fortnight's illness by Cynthia Borden, who gives some vague recollection of a former meeting.

INSTALLMENT NO. 38
The Desert Doctor.

It was some moments before Diana's nurse regained control of herself.

Then she said quietly:
"Poor child, the fever hasn't left you yet. You must lie down and be very quiet. I will call Max."

Obediently Diana lay back on her pillow and closed her eyes, but the little scene that had just been enacted at her bedside danced tantalizingly before her eyes despite the closed lids.

What curious impulse had prompted her to ask about an emerald? Could it be that she still had a fever despite the coolness and moistness of her flesh? And why should the woman start and look so terribly frightened? Out of all the possible fancies that a fevered brain might fashion, was it possible that she had hit upon the secret that lay behind that gentle patrician bearing?

The squeak of the door attracted Diana's attention, but she did not open her eyes. She felt some one bending over her and her wrist was taken in a firm, cool clasp.

"Feeling better?" asked a distinct professional voice.

With her eyes closed, it seemed to Diana that she must be in the consulting room of some fashionable metropolitan physician. The incongruity of that voice in the rough little setting which she knew her room to be, was startling.

"Are you Doctor Max?" she asked and opened her eyes.

She found herself over her a man somewhere in the late forties. Very blue kindly eyes looked out of a lean, tan face. There was a decided sprinkling of gray in his hair where it curled and he had a clean, whimsical mouth which encouraged trust and confidence.

"An Maxwell Borden," he said smiling, "and I have the honor to be your doctor. I am happy to say that my patient does credit to her physician. A couple of days more and she will be around and sound despite a nasty whack on the head."

Diana touched her forehead gingerly.

"Will it leave a nasty scar?" she asked.

He shook his head.

"Your beauty, my dear, will be quite unimpaired. You'll break many a heart."

Jilted—and He Never Knew Why

HE could not believe it! She refused him—refused to even see him again. And she would not tell him why.

The parting hurt her as much as it did him. She hated to do it, yet she knew it was all for the best. For she knew that she could never be happily married to a man whose breath was habitually disagreeable. Their dreams of happiness—shattered.

The peculiar part of this unpleasant ailment is that not one in ten of those who are afflicted with it even suspect it. Yet it is so quickly apparent to others. Be on the safe side! Steroline, used morning and evening, will instantly overcome most cases of bad breath. Steroline is a highly antiseptic liquid mouthwash, and is also fine for sore throat or tonsillitis. Get it from your druggist today, 50c a bottle.

hearts yet before you die."

"It's about time I started then," said Diana with a faint smile. In her weakness her thoughts flew to Dale. It was the first time since she had recovered full consciousness that her own affairs occurred to her at all, so interested had she been in her surroundings and the strange people who had succored her.

DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT.
"Do you know," she said, "it has just occurred to me that a country-wide search is likely being made for me unless you've already notified somebody that I am with you."

The doctor shook his head.

"We are far out of the beaten track here, my dear, and no inquiry concerning you has come to us. There was nothing about you for identification."

"That's so," Diana nodded, "but when you found me, wasn't there some one—"

The doctor shook his head again. "There was no one about. I found you on a side road just a few feet distant from the main highway, which leads to our nearest railroad station. It was just before sunrise. You were unconscious from a blow on the head. There were wagon tracks showing that a vehicle had passed that way."

Diana shuddered.

"The brute! Thank heavens he went on without stopping! I dare say he thought I killed myself when I jumped and he didn't want to be connected with the crime."

The doctor's brows were raised slightly but he asked no questions.

"You see, doctor, this is what happened," Diana was beginning, but he laid his fingers gently on her lips enjoining silence.

"Some other time, little girl. You mustn't exert yourself by talking now. Remember this, my sister and I are happy to have you with us. We belong to the great free west which asks no one why he comes or where he goes."

Diana snuggled down into her pillow.

"You're awfully kind, I think I am a little tired and I'd like to sleep. If I have already been lost two weeks, it won't hurt to wait a little longer before getting word to Alex and the others. Poor Lynn—I wonder—"

She had drifted off into slumber.

Easiest Way to Remove Ugly Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture)
Here is a method for removing hair from arms, neck or face that is unattractive and is quite inexpensive: Mix a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water and spread on hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes, rub it off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. No harm or inconvenience results from this treatment, but be careful to get genuine delatone and mix fresh as wanted.—(adv.)

Club Women To Send Checks For Expense Fund

Mrs. Albert T. Akers, president of the Fifth District Federation of Women's Clubs notifies the members of the fifth district clubs that Miss Nannie Davis, principal of the Tallulah Falls school, is to go to the biennial at Chautauqua as their ambassador and as their exponent of the splendid educational work of the state federation.

She is urging now that subscriptions to this fund be made by clubs and individual friends of the federation, and sent in at once, as the money must be hand by the 17th, the day the Georgia delegation leaves for Chautauqua. Send checks to Mrs. Akers, East Lake, Decatur, Ga. R. F. D. No. 3, or to Mrs. C. K. Ayer, 1422 Peachtree road.

She did not know the doctor sat beside her for more than an hour, his eyes studying the soft curves of her young face, the pouting droop of her lips and the fluff of hair that escaped from the bandage around the temples.

Several times he sighed and into his eyes crept a far-away look as though he saw distant lands and haunting visions. Once he touched her cheek softly as if assuring himself of its coolness.

Then, rising, he started to leave the room, stopped, turned back and bending over, touched his lips to her hand that hung over the edge of the bed.

APPOINTMENT OF DIRECTOR BIG STEP IN FOOTBALL

Crackers Lose Second Game to Chicks 5 to 1

Efficient Cleaning Up Possible in Conference, Hugh Fullerton Asserts

Way Is Opened for Radical Reform, as Director Will Have Authority Greater Than That of Commissioner Landis.

Zahniser Holds Clan To Five Scattered Hits While James is Hit Freely

Zahniser Hits Triple in Eighth Inning, the Only Extra Base Clout of Game—Graft Starts Rally in Ninth.

Memphis, Tenn., June 12.—Another left-handed aspect of the pitching entry here among the fallen in the wake of the rampaging Chicks. He is Bill James of the Crackers.

Left-handed Bill fell this afternoon at Russell's park when the Chicks in two spells of batting whopped out a 5 to 1 victory.

It was the sixth successive victory for the champions, and put them in second place as the result of the Barons losing to the Travelers and vacating the runner-up position.

Paul Zahniser, of the Chicks, pitched magnificent ball. He held the Crackers to five hits, the Crackers spending six hitless rounds.

The Crackers' lone score came in the fourth inning. With one out, Bernsen singled and went to third when Smith followed suit. Bernsen scored on Graft's long sacrifice fly to Camp in right. After the fourth the Crackers secured but one more hit, and that a single by Graft with two out.

Left-handed Bill, of the Crackers, pitched a weird game. The Chicks scored three runs in the first inning, a weird inning. The Chicks made four hits, had four stolen bases and two of them went out on strikes. The Chicks went out as they went to bat in the second, third, fourth and fifth innings. McLarry secured a single in the sixth, and only three Chicks faced James in the seventh. The Chicks made three more hits and two scores off James in the eighth.

The First Inning.

Jimmy Burke, the first Chick to face James greeted him with a smack down the third base line that Graft stopped, but couldn't handle. McLarry, on an attempted sacrifice bunt after McLarry struck out. Burke and McLarry then enacted a dual, with the play for Burke at third. Huber sent one sizzling toward short that Hock flagged, but couldn't handle in time to get Huber. It was a hit. Burke scored and McLarry went to third. Tutwiler went down swinging. With Camp at bat, Huber and McLarry set out upon a double steal, and it went through with McLarry scoring. Huber was in a chase when James threw to first base, but McLarry beat Klugman's throw to the plate. Camp then singled, scoring Huber, and Crits lofted out to Guyon in left.

As before mentioned, Bill James flung a mean left-handed ball until the eighth, when the Chicks took another batting position. Tutwiler started it with the triple that he might have fooled into a home run with a little more speed between home-plate and first. It was a drive over second that Smith couldn't get to, and rolled to the back fence. Zahniser was at the infield when the ball was returned to the infield. Huber singled, scoring McLarry. Zahniser hit a triple in the eighth, the only extra base clout of game. Graft started a rally in the ninth.

There were two flaws in the Chicks' fielding, but they cost nothing. McLarry let Klugman's grounder glide through him in the third, but two were out and Guyon forced Klugman. Zahniser let Guyon's bunt ball roll through his hands and legs starting the sixth. It should have been an easy out.

Bill Huber here contributed the stellar play of the afternoon when he cleared the ground and speared Mayor's hectic drive with his gloved hand. Guyon barely got back in time not to be doubled. Bernsen forced Guyon and then Smith fled out.

Travelers Beat Barons.

Birmingham, June 12.—Costly errors by Harper and Burkett in the fifth inning and another miscue by Harper in the ninth, helped Little Rock beat Birmingham here this afternoon after the Barons had led all through the game. The Travelers scored three in the fifth after the side should have been retired but for errors and won the game in the ninth. Jack Johnson scored an infield hit. Connolly singled into right and Harper let the ball get through him. Eberhardt was jerked and Bates, who relieved him, walked the first man up. Barrett beat out an infield hit and Connolly came across with the winning tally on an infield out.

Sugar.

New York, June 12.—There was a slightly easier feeling in the raw sugar market, with Cubas for June and July shipment quoted at 3 cents cost and freight, equal to 4.61 for centrifugal. There were sales of 150,000 bags of Cubas, July clearance to a New York refiner, with outlet open for immediate shipment. There was no sale at the same level. Raw sugar was easier owing to be lower ruling in the spot market more favorable cost advances from abroad. There was active liquidation early as well, as considerable stop loss selling, but after prices gained 6 to 9 points there was a partial rally on covering and re-shipment was resumed. There were second contracts for 100,000 bags of Cuba, 1906, at 4.70 to 4.76. The close was a decline of 4 to 7 points. June 8, 1906, 4.86; June 8, 1906, 4.86; June 8, 1906, 4.86.

In refined one refiner advanced list price 20 points to the basis of 5.50 for 100 lbs. granulated, but the market was unchanged at 5.80-6.00. Withdrawals on old contracts were quite active, but new busidelivery in refined futures at 6.30 or unchanged from the close of last week. Final prices were 5 lower to 25 higher; July

BETTER COTTON WEATHER CAUSES REACTION IN PRICES

Excited Advance of Last Week Given Sudden Jolt By Sunny Weather Report

New York, June 12.—The excited advances of last week were followed by a very sharp reaction in the cotton market today owing to reports of better weather in the south and general realizing or liquidation. Cotton contracts sold off to 21.43, making a decline of 79 points from the closing quotations of Saturday. And later months showed even greater losses with the market closing barely steady at net declines of 67 to 65 points.

Private cables reported general buying in Liverpool, but the advance there did not fully meet the local gains of late last week and the market here opened easy at a decline of 30 to 39 points. Reports that there had been very little rain in the south over Sunday increased a disposition to make profits on long contracts after the advance of about 2-4 cents per pound from the low price of bureau day to the highest level of Saturday morning. There were many rallies from time to time during the day, one of them coming after the publication of the weather forecast for showers in Texas, which was rather less favorable than had been expected by local map readers.

There was another on the detailed weather reports showing quite heavy rain in southwest Texas over the week-end, but otherwise the weather news was favorable and the lowest prices of the day were reached in the late trading when July sold at 21.61 and December 21.17, or about 70 to 85 points net lower, and from 75 to 93 points below the high prices of late last week.

There was heavy Wall street and western selling on the late decline which was partly attributed to weakness in grain and stocks, but the feature which emphasized was the improved weather and some brokers characterized the decline as a natural reaction following recent excited advances. There were conflicting rumors as to the mid-month condition figures of a southern authority ranging from 10 to 67.5, but no figure was definitely confirmed. Exports today 3,024, making 5,336,554 so far this season. For the week ending June 12, 1932, 11,000 bales; for the month ending June 12, 1932, 11,000 bales; for the year ending June 12, 1932, 11,000 bales.

New York, June 12.—Cottonseed oil declined sharply under liquidation and local selling forward months on the break in other markets, notably cotton. Closing bids 17 to 35 points below the previous day's closing. Prime crude nominal, 11.00 to 11.50; yellow spot, 11.00 to 11.50; white spot, 11.00 to 11.50; for the month ending June 12, 1932, 11.00 to 11.50; for the year ending June 12, 1932, 11.00 to 11.50.

New York, June 12.—Cotton, spot quiet; middling 22.15.

WIDE REACTIONS AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, June 12.—Wide reactions in the price of cotton today were the result of better weather conditions over the belt and their effect on a long interest which some brokers had been claiming for several days had reached unwieldy proportions. Very little rain was reported in the cotton region over Sunday and temperatures were higher in nearly all sections, constituting the sort of conditions that farmers have been hoping for in order to promote plant growth and enable them to cultivate the crop and check the activities of the boll weevil.

Liverpool was not up to expectations and this helped to bring about a lower market on the opening. With partial recoveries from time to time, the market was the downgrade throughout the session, standing toward the end 83 to 97 points under the closing quotations of last week. The close was 79 to 88 points down, net. July traded down to 21.51 and closed at 21.60.

A private bureau report of 67.5 as the mid-month condition of the crop attracted much attention and was considered very bullish, since it compared with figures of 72.1 at the end of May from the same bureau, but it caused little buying. The weakness of foreign exchange was a depressing influence, as was also the forecast of continued dry weather over the greater part of the cotton region.

New Orleans, June 12.—Spot cotton steady; 25 lower; sales on the spot, 1,026; to arrive, 37; low middling, 20.50; middling, 22.00; good middling, 23.00. Receipts, 31,255; stock, 174,884.

Harding's Speed Orders Observed

Washington, June 12.—President Harding's demand for speed in the framing of the administration's ship subsidy bill resulted tonight in an announcement by the merchant marine committee that it would be submitted to the house tomorrow.

Meanwhile the republican steering committee was considering the president's urgent request that the bill be put to a vote as a party measure, if necessary, prior to any adjournment of congress.

At a conference today with Representative Mondell, Wyoming, the republican leader, the president reiterated belief that the measure was of vital interest to the business welfare of the country and that it should not go over until the short session, beginning December.

Reports were current at the capital that the president had informed members of the merchant marine committee that congress would be called in session, solely to consider the shipping bill, if it failed to reach the voting stage before adjournment.

In his discussion of the legislative program with republican leaders, it was said tonight, the president had advised that no action be taken at this time on pending bills for disposal by the government of the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant. There was no indication, however, as to whether Mr. Harding was unalterably opposed to the proposal of Henry Ford for taking over the property, or simply to consideration of the matter.

The steering committee, it was said, reached no conclusion as to its program, although leaders, after telling the president of some opposition to the bill to the subsidy bill, assured him that efforts would be made to comply with his suggestion.

The resolutions later were sworn to by Rev. H. C. Emery, pastor of the First Methodist church before Judge H. J. Wood, ordinary of Whitfield county.

Genial Bandit Plays

With 3-Year-Old Tot While Robbing Daddy

New York, June 12.—With her father and his clerk bond and gagged nearby, 3-year-old Sarah Auster laughed merrily today as one bandit played with her, while three others rifled her daddy's jewelry store on Fifth avenue. She gave up the game reluctantly when the quartet fled with several thousand dollars' worth of loot.

Gabriel Auster, his clerk, and his daughter were in a store when a well-dressed young man entered. While the proprietor was showing him a watch, three other "customers" entered. One of the robbers displayed a gun and the proprietor and his assistant got this order:

"Get into the back room, quick!"

The little girl watched with interest while the bandits bond and gagged the pair. Then, twirling his watch, one robber said:

"You come and play with me, kiddie."

The subject of the sermon Monday night was "From Starlight to Sunlight" setting forth the progressive development in revelation and the unfolding of the Christian religion.

The subject for discussion Tuesday evening will be, "He Came to His Own," telling how Jesus came to His own people, was rejected by them, but to as many as received Him, He gave the power to become children of God. The service begins at 8 o'clock each evening.

Reival Meeting Petitions Against Pardoning Gentry

Dalton, Ga., June 12.—(Special.) As an aftermath of the hearing recently held before the prison commission relative to the application of Neal Gentry for pardon, and as an index to the intense interest existing here, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted at a revival service now being conducted here.

"Whereas, an announcement is made in the Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution of the 9th inst., that the prison commission of Georgia would on Thursday, June 15, consider an application for the pardon of Neal Gentry.

"Therefore, Be it resolved.

"First, That we, the citizens of Dalton, Georgia, and contiguous territory, unmoved by malice or uncharitable motive, but with an earnest desire for the eradication of all crime and sources of crime, do most earnestly plead with the Executive, the Governor, and with the Honorable Prison Commission of the great state of Georgia, that they will not grant this plea for pardon.

"Second, That we hereby do assure, them that we believe no greater travesty on justice could be committed, and no greater license to crime could be given and no greater mockery to the courts of justice could be made, than, in view of the long record and proven guilt of the applicant, for the plea to be granted. We sincerely believe that the nefarious business of the courts of justice has caused more murders, fostered more crime, and blighted more lives than any other cause in this great section of our great state.

"Third, That a copy of these resolutions to touching the character of the assemblage that adopted them, be sent to His Excellency, the Governor, to the Prison Commission and to the press."

SHRINERS GATHERING IN SAN FRANCISCO

BY LEN C. BALDWIN.
San Francisco, Calif., June 12.—(Special.)—Yanab's two special arrivals Sunday afternoon. The Georgia chapter of the Shrine of the Blue Lodge, No. 1, gathered at the Southern Pacific station.

The band, patrol, chanters, and oriental band had their photos taken by the photographers at the station. The ladies were taken in autos to the two hotels, Marx and Stratford, Yanab's headquarters. A special escort was sent by Islam Temple to meet the train.

A big parade was formed at the station and the 125 uniformed men of Yanab made a big showing coming up to the hotels. Large crowds were on the streets to witness the parade.

Potential: Bayne Gibbon has just found out that there are two brides and groomsmen at the special and a special reception will be given them during their stay in San Francisco. Tiny, the oriental band pony, arrive, safe and has handy quarters at the tables of the American express company.

In each room at the two hotels, the Shriner found a large vase of sweet peas with card, "The Georgia hosts and committee welcomes you to San Francisco."

San Francisco, Cal., June 12.—The great kaleidoscope of fantastic Oriental customs and decorations that represents the annual Imperial council of the Ancient Arabic council, nobles of the mystic shrine, began slowly to revolve today.

Swing gaily through the streets on the home stretch of their pilgrimage to the meeting place of the annual celebration. Bright spotlights of color in the noble costumes of greens, yellows, blues and purples—dressed the sombre gray and brown habiliments of work-a-day humans into the blue and gold of the temples of this Masonic organization poured their delegations into San Francisco.

Tomorrow the formal parades, the elaborate receptions to the Imperial caravan and the business sessions of the Imperial council will begin, but today was given over to welcomes, to finding quarters and to band concerts and impromptu bits of merrymaking.

The Civic auditorium, scene of the democratic committee, presented a dimly-lighted, mystic interior today for bands, orchestras and groups of chanters. Colored hangings and green boughs and the bare outlines of palm trees and balconies, while from the center, as if suspended from the dome of a mosque, swung a softly glowing Oriental lamp. Well-trained choruses chanted familiar songs before a crowd of several thousand.

Tonight the auditorium was the scene of a vocal concert by Shrine organizations from all parts of the United States and Canada.
